De Blasio's New York: One big green apple

OneNYC. A 90 percent reduction in waste production, more subway service, storm safeguards are on tap.

Greener. Cleaner. Faster. Safer.

Mayor Bill de Blasio marked Earth Day with a "blueprint for the future of New York City," an ambitious environmental plan to reduce greenhouse gases, increase recycling, expand mass transit and shore up the city against future Sandy-like disasters.

Reducing the amount of trash that comes from America's largest city is the centerpiece of the OneNYC plan.

"The average New Yorker throws out nearly 15 pounds of waste a week, adding up to millions upon millions of tons a year," de Blasio said. "To be a truly sustainable city, we need to tackle this challenge head on."

The mayor's plan

The mayor by 2030 wants to reduce the amount of garbage currently 3.6 tons — by 90 percent and would do it by:

1 Expanding recycling and simplifying it by 2020 with a single bin, instead of two.

2 Nearly eliminating trash being sent out of the city on trucks and barges. The city spends $350 million a year sending garbage upstate and out of state.

3 Offer tax rebates and economic incentives to encourage New Yorkers to buy into OneNYC.

What's not in the plan

The mayor did not endorse the City Council push to slap a 10 cent tax on plastic bags, but his office reportedly does want to work with the council to reduce their usage — 10 million a year.

Also missing from the plan was a push by many environmentalists to have tolls slapped on the East River bridges to encourage the use of public transit.

Plan for the MTA

De Blasio did, however, push for an expansion of subway service. In addition to the new Second Avenue Subway now underway in Manhattan, the mayor wants an expansion of the 4 lines into south Brooklyn.

The mayor wants the state-controlled MTA to build south along Utica Avenue to "provide a new transit option to residents of Crown Heights, East New York and Jamaica."

Utica Avenue "is one of the densest areas in the city not directly served by the subway," according to a copy of the full plan obtained by Capital New York.

Neighborhoods along

Fighting poverty

De Blasio included in his OneNYC plan a goal of moving nearly a million New Yorkers out of poverty.

- "The way forward is to create a vision for one city where there's opportunity for all, sustainability for all and fairness for all," de Blasio said.

Utica Avenue are currently served "by the second busiest bus route in the city, the B46."

Grand Central Station. Energy upgrades prove you're never too gray to go green Iconic Grand Central Terminal, among the most fabulous old New York structures, has gotten in on the Earth Day action.

The Metropolitan Transportation Authority has completed what's being billed as its largest-ever energy-efficiency project for $25 million at the Beaux-Arts palace, which opened in 1913.

"The upgrades will reduce harmful greenhouse gas emissions by more than 11,200 tons a year — the equivalent of removing roughly 2,140 cars from the road" and save $2.5 million in power costs each year, state officials said in a news release.

Among the changes: an installation of cooling towers, temperature controls and compressed air and steam distribution systems, air handling upgrades, and new chillers to enhance the terminal's original cooling system.

The project is one of several the MTA is partnering with the New York Power Authority to improve energy efficiency in its facilities.

Earth Day 5K unites green citizens

Environmentalism.

Metro tagged along on a green tour.

Earth Day New York led an Earth Day 5K Walk & Green Tour on Wednesday, giving participants an opportunity to interact with and learn about various green groups in the city.

A group of employees at Cantor Fitzgerald, a financial services firm, participated in the walking tour as a team-building exercise and a way to show support for Earth Day.

An employee of Cantor Fitzgerald, Samantha Beja, said, "We are looking forward to kickstarting our future green initiative by getting involved in Earth Day New York."

Another employee, Taris Burgess, said joining the tour was a "wonderful opportunity to learn about saving the environment, as there is a lot going on with climate change." METRO

Jury still out in Etan Patz disappearance

In court. If convicted, Hernandez faces a maximum penalty of life in prison.

Jurors deliberating murder and kidnapping charges against a man who confessed to strangling 6-year-old Etan Patz in 1979 ended a sixth day of deliberations on Wednesday without reaching a verdict in the notorious case.

Pedro Hernandez, 54, is on trial in the killing of Patz, whose disappearance from his New York City neighborhood nearly 36 years ago changed the way U.S. authorities respond to reports of missing or abducted children.

Patz was among the first children whose picture appeared on milk cartons in an effort to find them.

During the deliberations in state Supreme Court in Manhattan, the jurors asked Judge Maxwell Wiley for a list of all the witnesses and exhibits from the three months of testimony in the trial.

More than 50 witnesses testified. One the earliest was the boy's mother, Julie Patz, who took the stand in January.

The jury ended the day's deliberations without reaching a verdict and was scheduled to resume this morning. REUTERS

Booted. Shelter kicks out dozens of sex offenders after rape

A Kips Bay men's shelter has kicked out 25 sex offenders after one of its residents was indicted for raping a woman at a Flatiron bar, reports the New York Post.

Bellevue Men's Shelter, near 30th Street and 1st Avenue, announced that it has removed all of its Level 3 sex offenders because the home is only 650 feet from a school for learning-disabled children and 1,000 feet from a Montessori school. The offenders have been relocated to shelters that are not near schools.

The shelter housed Rodney Stover, who was indicted on Tuesday for raping a 23-year-old woman in a bathroom at the Turnmill Bar in Flatiron on April 11. Stover, 48, served nearly 20 years in prison for a 1993 sexual assault on Long Island. Stover "grabbed the victim by the throat and raped her inside of a bathroom stall," a police account from the 13th Precinct reported.

Stover was initially charged with rape, predatory sex act and assault for the attack. The Post reports that the exact charges in the indictment are still under seal. ANDREA PARK

Man 'planning terror attack on churches' arrested in France

Suspect. Police found weapons and bullet-proof vests in the suspect's car and at his home.

An Algerian man suspected of planning an imminent attack on a church has been arrested in Paris, with police discovering Kalashnikovs, hand guns and ammunition in his possession, top officials said on Wednesday.

The 24-year old electronics student, who is also suspected of the murder of a 32-year-old woman, was detained on Sunday after he apparently shot himself by accident and called an ambulance. He was not named.

France heightened surveillance of potential suspects and deployed troops to patrol sensitive sites after Islamist militants killed 17 people in January in attacks on the offices of the Charlie Hebdo satirical weekly and a Jewish food store.

He said the man had previously come to the attention of the French authorities as possibly wanting to go to Syria. Police had made checks on him in 2014 and 2015 without finding anything that would warrant further investigation.

Paris chief prosecutor Francois Molins said a search of the man's phones and laptops "revealed that he was in touch with another person, who could be in Syria, with whom he was discussing ways to carry out an attack and who had specifically asked him to target a church."

Le Monde newspaper said police believe that the suspect had tried on Sunday to steal the car of the woman who was later found dead and shot himself by accident during the aborted robbery. Her blood was found on his jacket, Molins said.

Molins said the Algerian had made "farfetched" comments, claiming that he had become afraid of holding so many weapons and had injured himself when trying to throw them in the river Seine, which flows through Paris.

Russia was also building up its forces along the Ukrainian border, she said. "After maintaining a relatively steady presence along the border, Russia is sending additional units there," Harf said, adding that the increase gave Russia its largest presence on the border since October.

In his opening statement, Hinckley's lawyer Barry Levine requested he be granted convalescent leave, the equivalent of outpatient status, so he could live full time with his 89-year-old mother.

"There is no dispute that Mr. Hinckley is clinically ready for the next step in treatment, which is convalescent leave," Levine told U.S. District Judge Paul Friedman.

Hinckley shot Reagan and three others, including White House press secretary James Brady, in a bid to impress actress Jodie Foster, with whom he was obsessed. A jury found him not guilty of attempted assassination by reason of insanity.

Testimony is expected to wrap up next week, but it could be months before Friedman renders a decision. REUTERS

He's known for being militant about plot details being revealed in advance of episodes airing, even going so far as including a list of specific plot points he hopes reviewers won't discuss in their articles when screeners are sent out.

He's meticulous about every aspect of the show's production, and occasionally includes costume notes in the scripts when he feels strongly about what someone should be wearing. METRO

Pope Francis plans Cuba stop before landing in Philly, NYC

Trip. It will be the Argentine pope's first visit to Cuba as pontiff.

Last December, Havana and Washington announced after 18 months of secret diplomacy brokered by the pope's diplomats and Canada that the two sides were working to re-open embassies in their respective capitals.

Before he gets to Philadelphia and New York City in September, Pope Francis will visit Cuba, the Vatican said on Wednesday.

The visit, en route to the United States, will cap his success in bringing the former enemies together after more than half a century of distrust.

Vatican spokesman Father Federico Lombardi did not specify how long the stop in Cuba would last, saying only that Francis had accepted invitations made by the Cuban government and the Cuban Roman Catholic Church.

"Both President Raul Castro and President Obama recognized and explicitly thanked the Holy Father for his gesture," Monsignor Jose Felix Perez of the Cuban Catholic Bishops' Conference, told Reuters in Havana.

Cuba had been a focal point for Vatican diplomats ever since Fidel Castro took power in 1959 and restricted church activities in what was a deeply Catholic country.

The Vatican's opposition to the U.S. embargo over the years gave it credibility with Havana as a diplomatic broker while at the same time it had good relations with a string of U.S. administrations.

President Barack Obama visited the pope last year and discussed Cuba. Francis later wrote personal letters to Obama and Cuban President Raul Castro urging them to "initiate a new phase" in their relations. REUTERS

Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone are never getting back together ... ever

After dating for three years — so basically, a decade in Hollywood — “The Amazing Spider-Man” stars Andrew Garfield and Emma Stone went on a “break” two weeks ago. But unfortunately this is no Ross and Rachel situation. According to Us magazine, a source close to the couple says they’re done for good. Apparently, Garfield got a little too into character preparing for his role in “Silence.” “He’s been in a dark place for months getting into the role. He wasn’t being the best partner,” a source tells the magazine. Can someone put this guy in a light-hearted rom-com next? Sheesh!

Sandra Bullock is hotter at 50 than you'll ever be

People magazine announced its “World’s Most Beautiful Woman” yesterday: the lovely Sandra Bullock. In classic Bullock form, she laughed off the honor and instead says she’s more honored to be the mother of her 5-year-old son Louis. “Real beauty is quiet. Especially in this town, it’s just so hard not to say, ‘Oh, I need to look like that,” she tells People. “No, be a good person, be a good mom, do a good job with the lunch, let someone cut in front of you who looks like they’re in a bigger hurry. The people I find most beautiful are the ones who aren’t trying.” We get it. You’re hot and a good person and there is no living up to you.

Bruce Jenner in a dress

New photos appear to show former Olympic athlete Bruce Jenner in a striped dress outside his Malibu home. The New York Daily News published the photos a couple of days prior to Jenner’s scheduled interview with Diane Sawyer. The interview is believed to be about Jenner’s coming out as transgender. Rumors and speculation have followed Jenner for some time now, with many media groups remarking on the athlete’s dramatic change in appearance. The Daily News reports that Jenner has also been seen wearing a sports bra: “A photo of the former Olympic gold medalist wearing what appeared to be a sports bra while riding his Harley-Davidson motorcycle emerged Monday, leading many to assume the star had already undergone breast augmentation surgery.” Jenner’s interview airs Friday. MATT LEE

THINGS ARE GETTING BETTER — IN 'STAR WARS'

As you all know, the new trailer for "Star Wars VII: The Force Awakens" was released last weekend. As someone who grew up as a "Star Wars" fan, has a website named after a main character and carries a Boba Fett helmet and a lightsaber in her trunk (hey, it's best to be prepared), I was pretty psyched. And by "psyched," I mean there was undignified, ugly-crying when I watched it.

There was just nothing like "Star Wars" when I was a kid. There were certainly very few female characters like Princess Leia. She was bold, she didn't take orders, she could shoot far better than any Stormtrooper, and she was a galactic senator! The only issue I had was that there was only one of her. I actually remember asking a friend if no one had moms in the "Star Wars" universe when I was little.

When the first cast list for the new film came out, there was only one new woman (Daisy Ridley) on it, and seven new men. It's the reason I started Legion of Leia. So you can imagine the joy I've felt as woman after woman was added to the roster.

Guys might not think about it that much, but as I've said in many an article, representation does matter. I certainly didn't realize exactly how much it would mean to me, personally, when Lucasfilm President Kathleen Kennedy spoke at the opening ceremonies for Star Wars Celebration. She was asked which "Star Wars" character she would be, and she replied, "I don't have many choices. But that's going to change. ... Going forward with all we're talking about, there are going to be a lot of wonderful new [female] characters," going on to mention her daughters and how important this is.

Princess Leia won't be the only woman in "Star Wars" anymore.

I knew it was coming. The cast has been out there for months. However, hearing the female president of Lucasfilm saying this on stage in front of thousands of people, and even more watching the live broadcast around the world, made me feel like all the hard work — blogs, websites, Twitter posts, books, fan films, etc. — of female "Star Wars" fans have made an impact. Someone is listening, and it means more to me than I can say.

May the Force be with you.

What brought Blake Lively back to acting

Interview. The former "Gossip Girl" was pretty much done with acting, but the script for "The Age of Adaline" changed her mind.

"Age of Adaline" director Lee Toland Krieger claims that Blake Lively came in insisting she was the best person for the title role, but Lively herself begs to differ. "I didn't say I'm the best person for it, I just said that I really wanted it," she explains. "I could give you a whole list of people that would've been better for it. But I was the most aggressive, I'll tell you that much."

It makes sense that Lively would approach the role with such vigor, considering she had to cancel the hiatus from acting she'd put herself on following the end of "Gossip Girl" in 2012. "I was on a TV show for six years. We shot 10 months a year," Lively explains. "I was just exhausted, and I didn't feel good at it anymore. When you have to do something so much, it's just muscle memory, and I wanted to take a break. I started my company, Preserve, because I thought, what else do I love? What else do I feel good at? What else can I be creative at while taking a break from acting?"

But she didn't block out Hollywood completely, with scripts still coming in. "I read 'Adaline' and thought, I can't not do this movie. I still wanted to be on a break, but I just thought I have to, have to be in this film," Lively remembers. "And then because it was such a special movie and such a special experience, I was reading other scripts and thought, how do I live up to that? And then I got pregnant, so I didn't have to."

It's a good thing she got over those feelings of inadequacy, too, because the role of

Blake Lively (with Michael Huisman) plays a woman who hasn't aged in 80 years in "The Age of Adaline." DIVAH PERA

One more thingThe future

And don't worry, she did find another script that measured up to "Age of Adaline," as she already has her next starring role carved out: "I'm doing a movie called 'All I See is You,' with Marc Forster directing and Jason Clarke," she says. "It's about a woman who loses her eyesight at a young age and then has an experimental surgery and gets her eyesight back, and how it effects their beautiful relationship and their marriage, which was so healthy when she was codependent, but now that she's not ... It's a very character-driven story." That should make for some interesting research as well.

Adaline — a woman born in 1906 who stops aging at age 29 — proved to be full of challenges.

"I always look for the closest thing to a character that I'm playing, and I try to meet that person and talk to that person. It's very hard to meet someone who's been alive for 100 years, and it's even harder to meet someone who's immortal," Lively admits. "So I thought, O K , when is a woman most defined by? When does she really blossom into who she is? And it's when they come of age. So if she came of age in the 1920s, I need to capture a woman from the 1920s who has that formality and who is stoic and very proper and very reserved and conservative, and then try to weave in some influence from the '60s. That's very, very different from where women came in the Edwardian era. She can't be alien, so she has to have this timelessness to her and she has to look like a mixture of all these decades, because she wouldn't just go shopping at Zara and speak like I speak."

WHERE TO EAT, DRINK & PLAY

Craft your palate

Treat your taste buds to the weird and wonderful world of local brews at these five craft-focused bars. EVA KIS

A great bar has many components — fun atmosphere, knowledgeable staff, good crowd — but in this city, with its exploding craft beer movement, we think a great beer bar should support local brewers. So we asked Jimmy Carbone of Jimmy's No. 43 to recommend some of the best bars stocking local favorites and breweries' latest experiments. One way to know you're in the right place is the Good Beer Seal, which tells you a bar is independent and keeps the high standards of quality and cleanliness needed to do craft beer right.

Spuyten Duyvil

359 Metropolitan Ave.,
Williamsburg
This place defines a Good Beer Seal bar: a carefully curated, always rotating selection on just six taps, so no mega-drafts need apply. Because it keeps things simple and highlights its selections, it's one of the bars where new beers are debuted in the city. There's also a deep list of specialty craft bottles, all served in an atmosphere inspired by a country Belgian bar.

Mugs Ale House

125 Bedford Ave.,
Williamsburg
You can trace the history of NYC's craft beer via the mugs at this pioneer of the craft bar scene — it started more than 20 years ago. This was the first place to pour some of the modern classics like Sierra Nevada and Anchor Liberty Ale. Their events are not for the faint of heart, with names like Split Thy Skull, and an annual Belgian beer fest in December.

Jimmy's No. 43

43 E. Seventh St.,
East Village
A former Ukrainian social club built in the '80s, it opened as a basement Belgian bar in 2005. With a full menu, it's a restaurant as well, hosting dinners, authors and foodie pop-ups. Look for a new spring/summer menu coming in May curated by a guest chef. They were on the sour beer trend before it was everywhere, and have hard cider and whiskey menus, too.

Mission Dolores

249 Fourth Ave.,
Park Slope
Owners the Wiley brothers have a roster of craft beer bars around the city — Great Harry, Glorietta Blady and The Owl Farm — but Mission Dolores is Carbone's favorite. Amid the quirky decor, the place always has a great draft list across its 24 taps. Get "stranded" in this part of Brooklyn to have a great excuse to spend some quality time at this bar.

Crescent & Vine

25-03 Ditmars Blvd.,
Astoria
The bar manager, Daniel Bronson, is the new force on the city's craft beer scene. He spearheaded Queens Beer Week, returning for its second year next month. A neighborhood bar with global ambition, it's got great drafts — and great wines, too. Queens has more breweries than any other borough, and Crescent & Vine always serves its neighbors' stock.

At left, the outdoor area will have a grill and occasionally host special events. Above, the ground floor bars, both oyster and beer, are open now. PROVIDED

Harboring a new crush

The much-anticipated Pier A Harbor House opened during the fall, but we can't wait to see it blossom.

MONICA WEYMOUTH
@metronewyork
letters@metro.us

Since opening late last fall, Pier A Harbor House has proven to be quite the comeback space. Once home to the city's docks department, the vacant, crumbling, 127-year-old building had never been open to the public before the team behind The Dead Rabbit set their sights on it.

"Pier A is a beautiful, unique Victorian pier and the last of its kind. The building itself is made for hospitality," says Danny McDonald, a partner in the project who saw something special in the 28,000-square-foot space at the tip of Lower Manhattan. "The location represents a unique bit of geography-meets-history, where the Hudson River and its environment meet the New York harbor."

Pier A's first floor is already open as a beer hall and oyster bar, serving seafood every which way — raw oysters, steamed mussels, tuna tartar and a 1.5-pound lobster bake, among others. (There's also a burger and other usual bar items, but really, get with the theme.) The third floor is reserved for private events, while the second floor opens May 5. Here's why we're excited to drop by this spring.

The ultimate al fresco experience

There's outside seating, and then there's being right on the harbor, away from rush hour and sidewalk traffic. Pier A will really shine once these April showers dry up. Nothing against the 400-some indoor seats, but we'll be throwing back Blue Points and brews on the deck, thank you. Look for cook-outs and the occasional weekend festival, too.

Sunset happy hours

Any time of year, Pier A's views are second to none: the Statue of Liberty, New York Harbor, the Financial District skyline. But now that the sun is setting as happy hour is dawning, we're calling dibs on a window table. (To be fair, there will likely be enough room for everyone. The layout is extremely group-friendly, should you decide to invite the entire office.)

The second floor

Next month, you'll be able to take things upstairs, where a more formal, Hudson Valley-inspired restaurant will be booked by two bars. Feel like you're drinking in the admiral's quarters inside the dark-paneled Harrison Room. Helmed by Irishman Liam Hendrick, the beer selection is old world-meets-new (Pier A even commissioned its own lager from Brooklyn Brewery) designed to pair with small seafood plates, and a cocktail menu by the Dead Rabbit's Jillian Vose. At the other end is the Commissioner's Room, a lounge with waterfront views.

we're loving:

Fumero at The Musket Room

The award-winning interior by Alexander Waterworth at Michelin-starred restaurant The Musket Room (265 Elizabeth St., Musketroom.com) is now complemented by a new piece of art that can be enjoyed by all. Literal hot spot Heatonist opens

The man behind Brooklyn's hot sauce bar gives us a spicy education.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metro.us

It's a great week to love hot sauce in New York City. Heatonist, the hot sauce emporium Kickstarted in February, quietly opened its Williamsburg tasting room on Monday.

There are more than 70 sauces to try now, though the store will eventually carry over 100 varieties made all over the world (yes, even some with the new king of heat, the Carolina Reaper), from Japan to South Africa. But it doesn't serve food or drinks (though pairing dinners and cookouts are planned), so taste responsibly.

Before we made a grab for the hottest thing to slather on our next meal, owner and hot sauce sommelier Noah Chaimberg laid some knowledge on us.

Hot Sauce Expo

Join over 10,000 of your hot-blooded friends at this weekend's third annual celebration of all things spicy at the Brooklyn Expo (79 Franklin St.). Prepare to find a new favorite among 47 vendors, watch the first class of the Hot Sauce Hall of Fame be inducted and, for the truly fearless, there's a Guinness World Record-certified eating contest to see who can be the master of the Carolina Reaper. Tickets are $10-$100; for more info, check out NYCHotSauceExpo.com.

Noah Chaimberg Kickstarted his Brooklyn hot sauce dream. MILES DIXON

Is heat just heat?
"There are definitely certain categories of ingredients that pair well with different foods and less well with others."

Is there a house blend?
"Our different sauce makers from around the world are sending us pepper seeds, so we're going to be growing them here in the garden this summer. After our first harvest, we'll try our hand at making hot sauce."

Are peppers the only way to get heat?
"Wasabi, horseradish, mustard, ginger, these have a lot of spiciness to them, but it's different from the capsaicin that we get from peppers."

Does the type of pepper influence the sauces?
"The peppers have a lot of different flavors because they're a fruit. They all are unique, and people's palates also react differently."

What should we do if a sauce is too spicy?
"People will often reach for dairy. We don't have whipped cream on hand, so just feel the heat and let it resonate."

How to plan the perfect summer

Camp can help your kids meet new friends and learn new skills. iStock

Compare and contrast: a few things to consider to find the perfect camp for your kid.

LAKSHMI GANDHI
@LakshmiGandhi
lakshmi.gandhi@metro.us

How do you know if your child is ready for sleep-away camp?

It's a question that Jill

Tipograph of Everything Summer, a consulting firm that helps parents plan their kids' summers, often gets from families considering camps.

"The first thing is assessing readiness. Is their child physically and emotionally ready for overnight camp?" she asks. "They have to be able to take care of themselves. Hopefully, they've also had overnight stays with friends and relatives."

We asked Tipograph, who has been an independent summer camp consultant for 20 years, for her tips on picking the right camp for your child.

Consider their personality

"It's really important to think about an individual's personality," she says. "Just because a friend or parent went to a certain camp doesn't mean that your child will be happy there."

Talk to your child

"Involve your child in your search for a camp," she adds. "Being part of the process gives them confidence." Make sure to ask your child how long they'll be comfortable being away from home. "Do you want a short-term camp [two weeks] or a longer-term stay?"

Every child has different needs."

It's important to consider how your child responds to instruction as well, says Tipograph. "Do they need individual attention or [are] they more go with the flow?"

Ask lots of questions

"Meet with the camp director when you visit," Tipograph advises. "Do you feel like their philosophy matches yours?"

Do you feel in sync with them?"

Think about if it's time to specialize

There are camps out there devoted solely to one subject like theater, music or art if you and your child want to focus on a particular talent. "That's opposed to a traditional camp, where a child is exposed to a lot of activities like sports, nature and the arts," Tipograph says.

How summer camp can change a child's life

Playing sports builds both character and friendships.

MEGHAN POOLE
@metronewyork
letters@metro.us

As June quickly approaches, it's time to think about how you'll keep your kids busy this summer. Instead of worrying that they will morph into couch potatoes, you may want to send them to camp.

Mike Strutt, founder of Kids In Sports, a new summer camp that focuses on athletics, believes summer camp is a valuable and memorable experience. While there are many different types of camps available, sports camps are among the most popular.

"With sports, you're getting a lot of different things that any parent would want for their child. Parents want their kids to be active and healthy and they want them to have fun and to get fresh air," Strutt says. We had the opportunity to speak with Strutt about some of the benefits of signing kids up for sports this summer.

Learning life lessons

Keeping kids active can prepare them for the real world. "The perseverance and some of the obstacles that they learn how to overcome are like real-life scenarios that will help them face future challenges," he explains. And he believes that it is

Tearing kids away from screens

It's pretty clear that kids these days are pretty attached to phones, computers, and any other gadgets they can get their hands on. "The earlier you teach children the values of exercise, particularly from sports, the better," says Strutt. "It's about getting them moving and running around and working with coaches, listening to instructions, as well as being with other children and making new friends."

never too soon to teach these values. "The earlier a child learns anything, the better," he says. "We love to plant that seed at a very young age."

Making new friends

Summer camp is a perfect opportunity for your kids to socialize and make new friends. Through team-building activities, kids will learn how to work together to accomplish goals and bond with their peers along the way. Strutt believes that friendship is an added bonus to sports and summer camp. For example, he uses "cooperative learning" games with children. In these games, the children work together without much assistance from the coaches. "The whole point," he says, "is for them to keep building upon themselves."

4 fun care package ideas

Your child will be delighted with their care packages.

JOANNE REINAUD
@metronewyork
letters@metro.us

The camp care package has been part of the sleep away camp experience for generations. But instead of sending the same old treats and extra sunscreen, why not liven things up a bit? Here are some suggestions.

1 Hand tattoos These temporary tattoos come in many different shapes, from animals to weird creatures, and allow your child to express their creativity and personality.

2 Color coordinated treats Does your child have a favorite color? Carefully select items based on their favorite shades and add everything from small stuffed animals to candy.

3 A letter from the family pet Your dog or cat may be the most missed family member of all. Adding a short note "from" Fluffy or Fido is a nice touch. Write that your pet hopes your child is having fun and that they are looking forward to playing with them again. Make sure to sign off with a paw print.

4 Help preserving memories The friendships and memories your child makes this summer could last a lifetime. Create a memory-themed pack with a "camp journal," disposable camera, friendship bracelets to make and an address book so that his or her memories are kept safely.

Remember, you'll probably miss them more than they'll miss you. ISTOCK

Blue Ridge Parkway

CAMERON DAVIDSON, VIRGINIA TOURISM CORPORATION

Serene mountain drives in Virginia

Running from northwest Virginia to the Smoky Mountains, Skyline Drive and the Blue Ridge Parkway offer a relaxing escape from the congestion of East Coast cities.

The trip starts in Front Royal, Virginia, just 75 miles from Washington. The pretty town is at the entrance to the Shenandoah National Park and Skyline Drive, so it is always busy with hikers, backpackers, mountain bikers and motor tourists. The town boasts that it is the Canoe Capital of Virginia. Located where two rivers connect to form the main stem of the Shenandoah River, it's a destination for paddlers and tubers. The conditions range from gentle float trips to intermediate white water. Several outfitters offer equipment rental, guided tours and lodging packages. For more information, visit www.discoverfrontroyal.com.

Skyline Drive ambles through the wilderness of Shenandoah National Park (www.nps.gov/shen). The speed limit on the 105-mile, two-lane road is 35mph, perfect for relaxing and enjoying the view. There are 75 scenic overlooks, plus waterfalls and easy walks just off the road. For hikers and backpackers, the park has over 500 miles of trails. Ranger stations have maps and other vital information for drivers and hikers. They also offer guided hikes and animal encounter programs.

Local inhabitants, including whitetail deer, black bear, wild turkey and red fox, roam freely, so keep your camera ready. Rather than drive the route in one day, stay overnight at one of the lodges or cabins in the park. Visit www.goshenandoah.com for information on lodgings.

The Blue Ridge Parkway (www.nps.gov/blri) connects seamlessly with Skyline Drive near Waynesboro. I-64 connects here if you need to loop back east. You'll find historic and cultural spots sharing the scenic views along this road. Plan to stop at Peaks of Otter, which was "the" mountain resort in the mid-1800s, and Mabry Mill, which demonstrates how resourceful, creative and just plain tough mountain settlers were. INSIGHT GUIDES | FRAN SEVERN

Touring Halifax, Nova Scotia

This year, Cunard Cruise Lines celebrates its 175th anniversary, and this is just one of many excellent reasons to visit Halifax, Nova Scotia, the birthplace and home of founder Samuel Cunard.

The major commercial hub of Canada's Atlantic Provinces, Halifax has great shopping, dining and nightlife, but its long seafaring history continues to underpin the city's enormous appeal: The remains of a vast hilltop fortress still keep watch over the bay; cruise ships and occasionally tall ships still frequent the harbor; and a salty tang still pervades the air.

The Cunard connection

Samuel Cunard, born in 1787, founded what is still a major cruise line. Its very name evokes the golden age of trans-Atlantic crossings, when the iconic, original Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary were the way to travel. As part of the anniversary celebrations, the Queen Mary 2 will be sailing into Halifax on July 10.

In 1912, one of Cunard's ships, the Carpathia, rescued survivors of the Titanic disaster (many of those who perished are buried in Halifax's Fairview Lawn Cemetery). The Maritime Museum of the Atlantic (www.maritimemuseum.novascotia.ca) tells this and other stories.

Welcome to Canada

Between 1928 and 1971 more than a million people — refugees, war brides, seekers of a better life — passed through the Pier 21 immigration shed, now home to the Canadian Museum of Immigration at Pier 21 (www.pier21.ca). Reopening in May 2015 after a major expansion, it provides insight into the contributions those people made to the nation's culture, economy and way of life.

History on display in Lyon

France's second city, Lyon, is renowned for its food, but it should be equally famous for its fine collection of unusual museums.

As well as conventional art and history collections, there are museums here devoted to the cinema, fabrics, marionettes and Lyon's role in the resistance movement during the World War II.

To those, now add the Musée des Confluences, which opened in December 2014.

This stunning new museum takes its name from its location at the spot where the city's two rivers, the Saone and the Rhone, meet. The building itself looks like a spaceship, and the museum's aim is nothing less than to tell the history of the world. It's a lofty ambition, but when you're still there after several hours, you might decide it has achieved it.

With over 3,000 items on display, from dinosaurs to waffle-makers, and all shown with imagination and flair, this has instantly become one of the world's great museums.

Letters to the editor

Workers do deserve pay

Re: 'If fast food workers want more money, they should earn it' (Metro, April 22) Jennifer M. Clark's letter to the editor is a re-statement of the same idea that has been spouted non-stop by a large number of people. But the problem is, they are just flat-out wrong in every way imaginable.

People deserve the pay they can force their employer to pay, no employer pays well because they are nice — so if fast food workers want to cost their employers' money until it is cheaper to pay them a 2015 wage than try to keep them at 1970's wage levels, that is called capitalism.

Wages SHOULD have gone up along with inflation, as prices did, but this did NOT happen. And while it would be nice, according to some, to restore slavery by means of wages a century or more out-of-date, it is actually a terrible idea in an economic view. I won't get into moral or social justice points of view since it would be like Latin to the people who are pro-poverty.

Another point on the pay deserved: Do professional football players really deserve millions of dollars for playing a game? Do movie stars deserve millions for playing pretend? Of course not; they get it not because they deserve it or their skills are so uncommon that it is a necessity, but because they held the employers over a barrel until their demands were met.

Nets comeback falters

Huge underdogs in Game 2, the Brooklyn Nets went on a 18-8 run to pull within a single point of Atlanta with under 30 seconds left but were unable to jump ahead, falling behind 2-0 in the series as things shift to Brooklyn for Game 3. A Deron Williams miss (on a wide-open look) nearly tied the game but clunked off the glass. Jarrett Jack had 23 points while Brook Lopez had 20 to lead the Nets.

Blueshirts one win from next round

NHL. The Rangers return to Madison Square Garden with a commanding 3-1 series lead after Wednesday night's victory.

The Rangers showed true grit and determination in their 2-1 comeback overtime win against the Penguins Wednesday night.

Kevin Hayes was able to poke a loose puck into the net three minutes and 14 seconds into OT to give the Rangers the win.

The Rangers, after battling back from an early deficit in a physical game that pitted two evenly matched teams, are now one win away from advancing to the Eastern Conference Semis. The two teams will tango at Madison Square Garden Friday night at 7 (MSG).

Credited on the game-winner with assists were Carl Hagelin, Martin St. Louis, leaders who helped the Rangers silence the ferocious opposing crowd.

The Penguins first snatched the momentum early (on the second shot of the game) as Patrick Hornqvist smacked in a goal just over two minutes into play, letting loose an eruption from the Pittsburgh crowd, desperate to get back into the series.

The Rangers tied things at one after a crazy bounce squeaked by Marc Andre-Fleury. The "dirty" goal would be attributed to Derick Brassard.

Brassard has a ridiculous 21 points (12 goals, nine assists) in 21 regular season and playoff games against the Penguins as a Ranger.

There were several spars throughout the competitive game, though no one lost their wits to start a costly full-blown brawl (which would have cost either team bitterly in the playoffs).

The Penguins had a handful of worthwhile opportunities as the clock waned in regulation but they were unable to find nylon, sending the game to an extra frame stuck at one-goal apiece.

Knicks optimistic

Jackson thinks Knicks can bounce back

The Knicks have Carmelo Anthony and not much else on the horizon, aside from a lottery pick in the upcoming draft.

But the team also has cap space.

Phil Jackson is quite confident that he and Anthony will do all they can to recruit talent to the Big Apple.

"I think we have $30-some million" in cap space," Jackson said, adding he knows how critical the early free agency period from the end of June to the end of July is to his plan. "That's going to be our challenge.

We are a league that's dominated by personalities, by talent, and getting two or three players with talent changes your direction quickly. We've all seen that. ... We'll do our diligence. And I know he [Anthony] is interested [in recruiting]. He's involved."

It's not a big secret that today's NBA stars love playing in the Garden — they just don't like calling the Garden home for 41 games. There's a big difference in putting on a show a couple times a season as a marquee road talent, and being an actual member of the Knicks, and hearing the jeers nightly.

Red Bulls find ways to win sans stars

The "One Percent Derby" is certainly in a state of transition as the once-star-studded tilt between the New York Red Bulls and the Los Angeles Galaxy is lacking, well, some stars. And for this latest incarnation of the Red Bulls team, that's perfectly fine.

Over the past few years, the Red Bulls have been among the biggest spenders in the league, with high-priced, high-profile internationals such as Thierry Henry, Tim Cahill and Rafa Marquez among others. But this year's squad is missing that seven-figure salary, headline-grabbing big name and yet, the team sits atop the Eastern Conference with an undefeated record.

The Galaxy, as well, have inked big names over the years, like David Beckham and Landon Donovan. The free-spending way of these two teams has led to the "One Percent Derby" moniker, an obvious nod of the head to the elitist quality of these two rosters.

But both teams head into this Sunday's match (5 p.m., ESPN2) in a lower tax bracket. Henry and

Sacha Kljestan has the Red Bulls undefeated. / GETTY IMAGES

Donovan have retired and Cahill has moved on to a payday in China, while Robbie Keane, the Galaxy's star striker, isn't quite the draw of those other names. The derby has moved into a different direction, this one lacking the luster of years past.

"I don't know if it's good or bad for the league," midfielder Sacha Kljestan said. "I think we still have two very good teams which is important. Yeah, you know Beckham's not there, Henry's not there so you don't have the star power anymore but you still have two of the top teams in MLS going up against each other on ESPN."

Kljestan is one of the faces of this Red Bulls team, a United States international who might not be a drawing card in the stands but has made quite an impact on this team. He has just one goal since being signed this offseason, but he is already being hailed by head coach Jesse Marsch for how he does the "little things" in making this team click. Three wins and two ties in five matches is the evidence to date that maybe the "One Percent" approach from the Red Bulls in the past isn't part of their future. KRISTIAN DYER

Game 5

A pivotal Game 5 will be played tonight in Washington as the Islanders and Capitals are tied in their first-round series, 2-2.

- The Capitals have struggled greatly on the power play in this series. The NHL's 16th best power play in the regular season is now 0 for 10 against Washington, including 0 for 4 in Tuesday night's Game 4 loss.

Islanders with issues

NHL. Beating Braden Holtby has been a struggle for the Islanders.

Jack Capuano threw down the gauntlet. Whether his stars pick it up remains to be seen.

A few minutes after the Islanders dropped a 2-1 decision to the Washington Capitals in Game 4 Tuesday night at Nassau Coliseum to even the Metropolitan Division Semifinals at two games apiece, Capuano publicly called out his top nine forwards for a lack of production.

"No," Capuano said when asked if the Islanders were receiving enough from their top three lines.

Following the first four games of the best-of-seven, Josh Bailey leads the Islanders with four points. Two-thirds of the top line, Kyle Okposo and John Tavares, are tied for second with three points apiece. Ryan Strome, Brock Nelson, Cal Clutterbuck, Nick Leddy and Lubomir Visnovsky are next with two points each.

"I think guys know

[it's] probably time for a change," Capuano said. "Guys are squeezing their sticks a little bit. You can see the energy and the confidence and the swagger those guys play with and we need to get more. There's no question our guys are giving it everything they have but at the end of the day, your best players have to be your best players."

If only that was Capuano's lone issue heading into Game 5 Thursday in Washington (7 p.m., MSG+). The Islanders' coach lamented the lack of depth on the blue line. Second-pair defenseman Travis Hamonic hasn't played in the series due to what the team has called an undisclosed injury, and his loss was exacerbated when Visnovsky was lost for the remainder of Game 4 following a thunderous hit by Capitals right wing Tom Wilson.
